DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

2. Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Rosen et al. (USPN 6045027).

Rosen teaches a friction stir welding method comprising the steps of placing interlocking workpieces on top of each other and lowering the rotating pin tool toward the lowermost workpiece and moving the pin along the joining area as is the conventional process (figures 2A, 2B, 3A, 3C and col 3 lines 1-48). It is noted that the nature of the process is such that friction heat is generated which plasticizes the material of the workpieces, creating a fine microstructure, which is typically free of voids and oxides. The apparatus comprises a rotatable shaft with a rotatable free end and a projection (16) disposed on a shoulder (14) of the shaft (figure 2A) wherein the pin and shoulder are provided with a wear layer (col 3 line 56 – col 4 line 11 and col 7 lines 18-62). See also Rosen claims 10 and 13-22.

3. Claims 9-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Nelson et al. (USPN 6648206 B2).

Nelson teaches a friction stir apparatus comprising a rotatable shaft (48) with a rotatable free end (36) and a projection (52) disposed on a shoulder (50) of the shaft (figure 3) wherein the pin and shoulder are provided with a wear layer (col 3 line 56 – col 4 line 11 and col 7 lines 18-62). See also Nelson claims 1-3.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Stevenson et al. (US 2004/0129762 A1, paragraph 2, nature of process to produce fine microstructure free of oxides and porosity), Gendoh et al. (US 2002/0158109, method and apparatus) and Duncan, Jr. (USPN 6726084, apparatus with wear layer on pin).
